Copy-ready research questions

1. For my electrical services [services], operating area [states/cities/ZIPs] and delivery constraints [people/equipment/travel], who buys nearby? Separate reported performance-location labels, the actual facility, recipient and contracting office. Give the purchased service, source dates and evidence; do not treat an address as proof of reachable local demand.

2. For my electrical services [services], crew and equipment [capacity], operating area [places], schedule [limits] and cash constraints [payroll/supplier terms], what size and type of work could my business pursue? Compare actual purchased scope, qualifications and delivery needs with complete historical award identities, full-period funded/exercised/potential values and material changes. Keep mixed trade services and options explicit; do not annualize a multi-year value or infer eligibility from the title.

3. What may be coming next for these services? Separate current notices, dated published forecasts and contract-end leads. For each, give the currentness evidence, access route, eligibility questions and what remains unknown. An end date alone does not establish completion or a rebid.

4. For notice 36C25027Q0014, which documents did you actually read? Identify the version and paragraph supporting each requirement, deadline and deliverable; say what is unread. Reconcile the older cover and captured amendment. If a document was unread, identify the SAM.gov notice page for official follow-up rather than implying you read the attachment.

Use the answer critically

Ask Qualified Bid for source dates, actual document read status and unresolved questions. A notice link or summarized title does not establish that all attachments were read. Confirm unread requirements in the official source and retain the citation you relied on. Do not upload sensitive information to an ordinary assistant connection without the contract's approved handling authority.

From evidence to your decision

Record company-specific evidence and the unresolved gap. Keep a server-returned profile recommendation separate from source facts and your own decision; do not invent a score, bidder qualification or partner commitment.
